The Pandemic: Tackling Poverty and the Growing Educational Digital Divide

So much has been affected by the world wide COVID-19 pandemic, but probably one interconnected and long-lasting ramifications will be seen in the area of education and digital literacy.

For the already poor and vulnerable, because of their lack of access to technology and online learning, their education has been further hindered, which will only increase the wealth gap and exacerbate poverty. This dismal picture has been highlighted in the 2020 Sustainable Development Goals Report.

How can young people take action, particularly in this developed city of Hong Kong? What efforts can they undertake to make a change?

Join this 7-day intensive leadership summer school that equips young future leaders with a perspective, mindset, desire and commitment to bring about positive changes.

Key Learning Outcomes

Recognise your role as a potential future global leader for social good and sustainable development

Understand the social and economic problems resulting from the global COVID-19 pandemic, especially in the areas of education and digital literacy creating an even wider wealth gap

Analyse the issues and recommend innovative solutions that support education and digital technology to improve and equalise the standard of living for everyone

Har Jisum
(America)

The Summer School helped me develop my communication skills. I particularly enjoyed learning about the environment and sustainability through site visits.

Nicholas Chan
(Hong Kong)

The Summer School was eye-opening. It gave me the opportunity to communicate with people around the world, as well as a direction on how to build a better world as an individual.*

Vidhaan Chand
(Sri Lanka)

I really enjoyed the in-depth explanation and activities about the circular economy. I also appreciated the stress on leaders putting learning into practice to achieve a sustainable future. It was really exciting and insightful.

FAQs

Q1: Will the Summer School be cancelled if the outbreak of pandemic gets worse or remains unstable?

A: Participants' health is always our top priority. We will keep updating participants on our latest decisions. If the situation becomes unstable, the Summer School will be conducted fully online (Virtual Mode). Confirmation on the learning mode will be announced no later than 27 June 2021 (Sunday).

Q2: Since there are two Modes of learning, how much should I pay?

A: A non-refundable Application Fee of HK$100 is required. Successful applicants will be further required to pay the Hybrid Mode fee of HK$5,600. Should the programme be entirely virtual, which costs HK$3,500, the difference of HK$2,100 will be refunded by cheque.

Q3: How do you ensure the online training quality?

A: The Summer School offers a whole range of educational activities that encourage experimentation and practice. Participants will be motivated to learn in an online learning environment by interacting with different digital platforms and tasks. Each group leader will provide support and give guidance to the small groups. Feedback from the participants will also be collected daily for advancing training effectiveness.

Q4: What precautions will you take to ensure a safe and clean environment if the Summer School happens physically?

A: We will continue to closely monitor developments of COVID-19 and follow the latest guidelines issued by the Government and health authorities. The Institute premises and facilities will be disinfected at least twice daily.

If the Summer School is conducted offline, participants will have to submit a health declaration form every day. Participants who have fever or respiratory symptoms will not be allowed to attend the training. Health ambassadors will be assigned to raise participants' awareness on personal hygiene. Please note that if a participant is notified by the government or medical authorities to undergo a COVID-19 test, he or she must comply and should not attend the training on-site until receiving a negative result.

Meanwhile, class size will be reduced during the Summer School. Participants will be required to maintain social distancing in classes and wherever else appropriate. Desks and common seating spaces will be rearranged to maximise the space between participants.

Q5: Will surgical masks be provided?

A: Hygiene materials such as hand sanitiser gel will be available on site. Participants are advised to wear their own surgical masks which will also be available upon request.

By following the latest regulations and guidelines of the Government and health authorities and registering visitors' details (last updated on 28 April 2021), The HKFYG Leadership Institute ensures the prioritisation of participants' health and safety.
